

CRAFT IN AMERICA

SCHROEDER CHERRY: UNDERGROUND RAILROAD, NOT A SUBWAY

RESOURCES AND MATERIALS FOR TEACHING RESOURCES

- Schroeder Cherry's segment in Craft in America's PLAY episode, craftinamerica.org/episode/play, which includes scenes of the construction of his puppets
- Schroeder Cherry's performance of Underground Railroad, Not a Subway, craftinamerica.org/short/underground-railroad-not-a-subway-by-schroeder-cherry
- Schroeder Cherry's performance of The Children's Civil Rights Crusade, craftinamerica.org/short/schroeder-cherrys-civil-rights-childrens-crusade
- The James E. Lewis Museum of Art's website features Dr. Schroeder Cherry's work as the museum's curator, jelmamuseum.org/schroeder-cherry
- PBS features online information and videos about The Children's Civil Rights Crusade, including first person interviews with former student participants Charles Avery, Jessie Shepherd, and Janice Wesley Kelsey, history.com/news/childrens-crusade-birmingham-civil-rights
- PBS also features a documentary and information about the Reverend Fred Shuttlesworth, who was an instrumental leader in organizing The Children's Civil Rights Crusade, pbslearningmedia.org/collection/shuttlesworth pbslearningmedia.org/resource/the-childrens-march-media-gallery/shuttlesworth
- PBS has an information page on the Underground Railroad, with links to information on Harriet Tubman, the prominent conductor on the Underground Railroad, and on Levi Coffin, an abolitionist, pbs.org/wgbh/aia/part4/4p2944.html
- Maps of the United States, both current and historic, will be helpful for discussion aids. The Smithsonian website shows maps that demonstrate the spread of slavery across the United States, smithsonianmag.com/history/maps-reveal-slavery-expanded-across-united-states-180951452